

Bioenergy Healing & Massage Therapy Wellness Care

TERMS OF ACCEPTANCE

When a client seeks bioenergy healing care, and when a bioenergy therapist accepts a client for such care, it is essential that they are both seeking and working for the same goals.

Bioenergy healing has only one goal. Therefore, it is important that the client understands that goal and the means and methods that will be used to attain it. In this way, there will be no confusion, misunderstanding nor disappointment.

Clients usually are only interested in getting rid of whatever symptom or condition that is bothering them. However, bioenergy healing is not intended to be a medical diagnosis or treatment of your symptoms or disease.

The purpose of bioenergy healing is to restore the flow of the body's vital life force energy to the brain and body through releasing chronic physical or emotional stress held within the connective tissues. Chronic stress held within the body can lead to pain and disease by interfering with the brain's ability to control and balance the body's chemistry and vital life support systems.

A bioenergy correction to release physical or emotional stress is accomplished by gentle directional acupressure and specific connective tissue stretching. This restores the flow of vital life force energy, balance, control, calmness, and healing to the brain and body. A therapeutic chair massage addressing key areas of myofascial stress follows a session of bioenergy healing care, unless contraindicated.

With a proper vital life force energy supply to the brain and body, health and healing improve. In some, symptoms go away quickly, and for others, it may take months or years, or not at all. Regardless of what disease or symptoms you may or may not have, a bioenergy healing therapist does not offer to medically diagnose, treat, or cure it. The only goal of bioenergy healing is to allow the body to better express its own innate healing and health potential. Furthermore, additional advice given on other aspects of your wellness needs are intended to support and enhance your healing and health, and not to diagnose or treat your symptoms or disease.

I have read the above, understand it fully, and undertake bioenergy healing wellness care on this basis.
